ALLIES: A LITERARY ANTHOLOGY

GUEST EDITED BY LADAN OSMAN
YVONNE ADHIAMBO OWUOR
ED PAVLIĆ
EVIE SHOCKLEY

BOSTON REVIEW FORUM
CONTENTS

Editors’ Note 6
Adam McGee, Evie Shockley, & Ed Pavlić

FICTION

Two 8
Sagit Emit, trans. Yaron Regev

To the Fordham 24
Samuel R. Delany

When the Climate Changed 34
Samuel R. Delany

All We Remember Will Be Forgotten 44
JR Fenn

Mother, Grow My Baby 62
Sabrina Helen Li
Chapati Recipe
Noel Cheruto

Say Something
Tananarive Due

POETRY

&
Christopher Kempf

From The Kindreds
Meredith Stricker

From Mass Extinction
Sarah Vap

At the Gates, Mikhail Makes Me a Feast
Hazem Fahmy

Three Poems
C. X. Hua

Against Travel: A Collaboration
Rachel Levitsky & Suzanne Goldenberg

Activation Instructions for 3-D Poem
Amy Sara Carroll

‘Alams from the Black Horse Prison, Tripoli, Circa 1981
Khaled Mattawa

A Request
Tess Liem
ETC.

Another Way to Love This World 80
Abdellah Taïa, trans. Amanda DeMarco

Translation 100
Mattilda Bernstein Sycamore

A Brief History of the Social Justice Ally 123
Micki McElyea

The Privilege of the Ally 133
Rigoberto González

The Historian and the Revolutionary 150
Walter Johnson & Tef Poe interviewed by Mordecai Lyon

Solidarity Through Poetry 160
Mark Nowak

“We Cannot Be the Same After the Seige” 171
Roderick Ferguson

Ally: From Noun to Verb 179
Vijay Iyer interviewed by Robin D. G. Kelley

contributors 190
Allies, comrades, accomplices, partners, lovers, family, revolutionaries: through a multiplicity of perspectives, our contributors explore what it means to forge alliances with people who are not like us. This is not only a political question—many contributors focus on the theme’s private, familial, erotic, and ecological dimensions. But in a moment of global and national chaos fueled in part by intensified identity wars, the political dimensions of the term “ally” are deeply resonant. The poems, short stories, essays, and creative nonfiction in Allies offer insight for how to build bridges across the rifts that threaten our survival.

This anthology is a publication of Boston Review’s ARTS IN SOCIETY program, which explores how the arts speak to the most pressing political and civic concerns of our time. Visit bostonreview.net/arts-in-society.